2021 Essay Contest: What I’ve Learned

It has been a challenging year for students. Whether you did in-person learning, virtual learning, or some combination, you have had to deal with issues that your parents, teachers, and local government officials could not have imagined. But by staying committed to your studies and working with your parents and teachers to overcome the issues, you have been a big part of the solution. Well done!

The Virginia Municipal League believes that you probably have a few ideas about what worked – what did not work – this past year and we want to hear them.

Imagine that you decide to run for mayor or community leader of your locality (city, town, or county). You are invited to give a short speech (400 – 1000 words) titled “What I’ve Learned” to a group of teachers, school administrators, and parents who want to know the following things:

1. Something you have experienced or done as a student this past year that you think worked well.
2. Something that did not work well for you as a student.
3. If you are elected, what would you ask everyone to do so that the thing that worked well for you (#1) could help more people and the thing that didn’t work (#2) could be better?

Let us know what you’ve learned!
